The fire was returned by the assailing party, and some seventy-five shots were exchanged. Meantime, the curimer, being free, and realizing that an attempt was being made to rob the train, pulled the throttle wide open and the train sped away, leaving the would-be-robbers discomilised and alone. The road officers had be nexpecting an attack for a week, and were prepared for it. No one on the train was injured, but it is believed several or the robbers were hit. A posse started in pursuit, and it was reported that two of the robbers had been captured, but the report was not confirmed.
